Health on a cellular level by Schussler Cell Salts, the brilliant Homeopathic Minerals

Disease starts at the cellular level, functional disease is the manifestation of chronic cellular disharmony. Disease is caused by the three main underlying causes:

Chronic cellular deficiency

Chronic Cellular intoxication

Chronic Inadequate cellular energy flow

Disease is the state of internal cellular imbalance and disharmony at all physical, emotional, mental and energy levels caused by the main underlying causes. It is created in the primary site, and it manifests itself on the battle ground or manifestation site such as an organ, gland or tissue based on an individual terrain, tendency, predisposition, food, nutrition, lifestyle and other environmental factors. Therefore, we should look into it fundamentally and treat the diseased body as a whole.

Underlying cause of disease is an internal phenomenon as whole, manifestation of disease is an external symptom on individual part. Each individual cell of your body is a marvelous organism that normally select or rejects substances to maintain the state of health.

The homeopathic tissue salts regulate and balance the biochemical processes at the cellular level. Each cell salt performs a specific function in the body's vital processes and all of these functions and processes are interrelated.

- Chapter Two: Comparison of the Attacking Ability of the Three Kinds of Dry Heat
- Chapter Three: Comparison of Diseases Cause by Three Kinds of Dry Heat
- Chapter Four: Comparison of the Features of the Three Kinds of Dry Heat

Conclusion

- The malignant mass dry heat is the pathogen to cause cancer condition.
- The malignant dry heat is the fundamental pathogen to produce malignant mass dry heat.
- The excess dry heat is a fundamental pathogen to produce malignant dry heat that follows the principle of quantitative accumulation which leads to qualitative change.
- The Chinese herbs and herbal formulas cannot directly reduce malignant mass dry heat and malignant dry heat.
- The Chinese herbs and herbal formulas can only reduce excess dry heat which indirectly reduce malignant dry heat and malignant mass dry heat. So, the solution is to take the right Chinese herbs and herbal formulas as early as possible for prevention

What is Anthroposophic Medicine ? An integrative medicine of European origin

Anthroposophic medicine is an integrative approach to treatment that extends and enhances health outcomes by looking outside of isolated symptoms towards a more holistic conception of health. This conception includes physical, psychological and spiritual health, as well as the impact of a person's environment and social context.

Anthroposophic medicine focuses on how to keep people healthy rather than on why they fall ill : this is called the « salutogenic » approach.

Developed in the 1920s by Austrian scientist and philosopher Rudolf Steiner and Dutch physician Ita Wegman, anthroposophic medicine sought to expand the materialistic understanding of health and disease

The anthroposophic medical approach is designed to complement conventional medicine.

From the point of view of anthroposophical medicine, disease results from an imbalance of the four levels of the human being : the physical body, the life body (etheric body), the psychic body (astral body) and the individual spirit. The aim of therapy is to establish balance between these different levels.

The treatment is multimodal : medication, therapeutic arts, art of movement, biographical study. Drug treatment relies on the law of analogy between a substance of nature and the inner process of the human being. Specific pharmaceutical processes allow to direct the substances of the external nature towards the internal processes of the human being. The other anthroposophical medicine therapeutic methods require the active participation of the patient

.Anthroposophic Medicine is the object of an important preclinical and clinical research.

*American Osteopathic Society of Rheumatic

The Endocrinology of Pain Management

Severe, persistent pain is a stressor on a patient's homeostatic system. Pain depresses hormonal response. Adequate pain control with opioids also depresses hormonal function. If the patient's hormones are not balanced, the patient cannot function at an optimal level and deteriorates. When pain flares, excess cortisol leads to LH suppression, testosterone deficiency, fatigue, and "burnout." Our goal is to balance the hormones depleted, leading to a harmonious hormonal symphony. Many major adrenal and gonadal hormones become deficient during pain crises and ongoing opioid treatment. These patients do not respond well to prescribed pain medication and report symptoms such as poor pain control, depression, mental impairment, insomnia, allodynia, and hyperalgesia. Pain practitioners must thoroughly understand the combined effect of pain and opioid-induced suppression on the hormonal system. An added benefit of hormone harmony is due to the anabolic and regenerative properties certain hormones possess. We discuss which hormones are involved and which patients will benefit most from a hormone evaluation. Lastly, we look at biomarkers we can use to navigate the world of hormones safely and the inflammatory proteins (cytokines) affected by each hormone. The slide pictured to the right is a summary of our conclusions.

Natural Wellness for Women, United States

Natural Management of Anxiety in Women

Anxiety is one of the more common mental health diagnoses given to women, with 23.4% of women in the US being diagnosed with some form of anxiety (compared to 14.3% of men), and with the prevalence holding rather consistent over the past 10 years. Women frequently experience somewhat different issues feeding into their anxiety than do men. It is the presenter's position that in most cases, anxiety is a symptom of some underlying life imbalance rather than a primary disease in its own right, that the underlying imbalance can be assessed, and that interventions and solutions not involving toxic, synthetic, habit-forming medications can be instituted alongside of or as alternatives to medications to manage anxiety. Underlying causes may be related other health conditions; food or environmental sensitivities; biochemical or hormonal imbalances; social, familial, or economic stressors; spiritual issues; or any combination of these factors. Numerous effective, nonchemical, nontoxic solutions for anxiety have been identified, and in the correct combination for the individual, which is subject to change as the individual progresses and life factors change, may be very effective complements or alternatives to standard medication therapies. This presentation will briefly review a number of these interventions and identify appropriate situations in which to use them.

Celia Javadi earned her Naturopathic Doctor from Trinity School of Natural Health in 2016; Master of Arts in Education from Ohio State University in 2001; Bachelor of Science in Education from Ohio State University in 1988; certificate in Medical Assisting from Kansas City College of Medical/Dental Assistants in 1971. Bioenergetics Improves the Flow of Energy to Support the Health of the Human Biofield

We need not look far to find someone who has had a recent issue with an ER or Doctor visit that has run amuck! Asking ourselves valid questions about where conventional medicine is missing the mark seems highly instrumental. Has the west placed too much importance upon biochemistry, not enough upon the balancing of healing modalities? Have we given too much power to mega Industries, such as Drug Companies?

All the while forgetting what mystery schools of history have long known. Our bodies have profound healing abilities. We all have self healing wisdom within our human energy fields. Our Bio Fields effectively carry information throughout our multi field bio-energy system. Bioenergetics is the study and correction of energy flowing through a living system. It's my mission to bring equilibrium to individual living systems of various types by helping to remove distortions in the Bio Field via Reiki and Bioenergetic healing modalities. Thus, bringing vital wellness information to the whole of one's structure.

- I will touch upon what Bioenergetics is.
- How bioenergetics can be used to find blockages in the flow of energy, which then leads to physiological symptoms of disease & pain.
- How Reiki & bioenergetics interrelate & compliment one another.

I'll give a couple of personal positive cases I have experienced using Bioenergetics in the few months I've been certified as a NES health coach practitioner adding this modality to my Reiki practice.

- Instead of using pharmaceuticals that many times have difficult side effects due to their toxic load, we now have a new healthier option, structured water! Imprinted water with information carrying optimum instruction allowing your body's own wisdom to get back on track.
- I'll share a bit about our brand new device called a miHealth, hand held bioelectric device that can be used both on & off the body.

Understanding the function of the endocannabinoid system - wave nature basics

To understand the organizational response induced by phytocannabinoids, we would need to use a real scientific model, but financialized research does not allow us to do this.

A doctrine prevails in term of which a culture in a petri dish is accepted as a living cell. A living cell in a flask does not have the attributes of a living cell in a human organism, namely the electromagnetic and other wave fields and environments of the living organism. It also does not have the molecular network system represented by the endocannabinoid system, with a specific charge that provides a high level of internal balance for the whole organism.

The new scientific model considers the living cell in a living human organism as the basic unit of life, and not the living cell grown in a flask.

The new model allows us to track energetic changes in the body through simple biophysical measurements and to deliver personalized therapies using techniques that have been known for thousands of years. We can continuously monitor the tone of the endocannabinoid system and deliver phytocannabinoid therapies depending on the level of stability. In this way, we help the body to control itself internally, using the tools of integrative and traditional medicine to help the body to complete regeneration. Patients do not have to get used to their illnesses but can fight to regain their health. The presentation will conclude with a case study of the monitoring method.

Honorary Candidate of Honor Causal in Neuraltherapy and Detoxification Methods. President of the Cannabinoid Medical Foundation. The Mind Body Link: The Role of Clinical Hypnotherapy as a Seamless Complementary and Integrative Therapy to Prepare, Condition and Instil Compliance with Prescribed Treatments

Clinical Hypnotherapy is the perfect tool for doctors, specialists and practitioners of Traditional Medicine to deal with that percentage of patients who either can not or do not comply with treatment instructions. Some examples of treatment instructions a percentage of patients may have trouble complying with could be: 1) to lose weight and keep it off as a condition of, or ongoing requirement of treatment. 2) to quit smoking. 3) to adhere to a regular exercise regime or any of a number of reasons, beliefs or excuses for not doing so. This solution is as easy and valid as the current practise of referring to other expert health care professionals and can be delivered in many forms if suitable and available from regular availability at the doctors/specialists/practitioners surgery or consulting room, to outsourcing to the therapists premises, or, online delivery. This brief presentation will outline the workings of Hypnotherapy, dispel some myths and misconceptions and include an experiential example of hypnotic trance. The modern coupling of Clinical Hypnotherapy and NLP is proving to be a fast and efficient way to change the unwanted habits, disorders, perceptions, beliefs and behaviours accumulated over a lifetime.

Scientific Basis of How Chicken Soup Relieves Common Cold symptoms

Chicken was domesticated 10,000-2,200 BCE in Southeast Asia. It then spread to China and India. Chicken noodle soup became a popular dish in China 960-1279 CE. In 1200 CE Maimonides prescribed chicken broth for respiratory illness. It is now known as “Jewish penicillin.”

In 200 BCE, The Chinese medical text Huangdi Neijing stated that chicken soup is “yang food”, a warming dish to which different herbs can be added to cure various disease.

Chicken soup is consumed as a staple or medicine in almost every country of the world. It is made by cooking chicken with ingredients from vegetables, herbs, or spices.

Chicken meat is high in protein content. Among the amino acids, cysteine was found to have mucolytic, immuno-modulatory and anti-inflammatory properties.

Vegetables, herbs, and spices contain bioactive compounds with antioxidant, immune-modulatory and anti-inflammatory properties.

A typical Chinese chicken soup is made up of chicken meat, onions, garlics, ginger and noodles.

The common cold is caused by rhinovirus. It is characterized by nasal discharge, sneezing, sore throat, and cough. There is no cure for the common cold. Decongestants, Antihistamine, antitussives, expectorants, and analgesics are generally ineffective.

Chicken soups reduce cold symptoms and shorten the duration of illness. The combination of cysteine from chicken meat and phytochemicals from vegetables herbs and spices provides a rational treatment of a common cold.

Medicinal Cannabis: Old Medicine, New Applications?

Cannabis sativa has been used for thousands of years medicinally as well as industrially. There has been a resurgence in interest in this plant medicine worldwide in recent times, with regulations changing and stigma breaking down. The endocannabinoid system (ECS), one of the most important neuroregulatory systems in our body, wasn't discovered until the 1990's. Constituents of cannabis can interact with our ECS. This presentation will explore medicinal cannabis, its key constituents, routes of delivery and therapeutic actions. It will also present some of the scientific evidence of efficacy using some medical conditions as examples. It will also discuss some of the safety aspects of the plant.

Biography:

Kylie is one of Australia's leading healthcare practitioner educators in medicinal cannabis (MC). After career changing from optometry, she worked in senior roles within the Australian university and private education sectors before entering the cannabis industry in 2018. She set up the ICCM, an online learning platform for professionals focused on MC. In 2022, she led an observational study investigating the effectiveness and safety of medicinal cannabis in Australians. She has published two books, one on integrative oncology and the second on medicinal cannabis and mental healthcare. Apitherapy- the Effective Natural method of Integrative Medicine

In the Carpathian-Danube area are valuable traditions inspired by ethnomedicine of using hive products in apitherapy, which are scientifically studied and applied as part of integrative medicine.

Apitherapy means treating a variety of conditions with natural bee products, without any processing, or with tinctures and extracts, like in the case of propolis, and more recently in the form of apitherapeutic drugs. Apitherapy is a natural treatment alternative, scientifically based on numerous studies and clinical experiences, which will be supported in this presentation. Bee products have a wide range of biological properties and scientifically proven pharmacological actions, beneficial in maintaining the health of the human body, and in preventing and treating various diseases.

Bee products are complex substances that the bee secretes or produces through the collection, processing, and storage of natural substances (nectar, pollen, etc.), which the beekeeper then collects from the hive or directly from the bee, such as in the case of venom. The most used bee products in apitherapy, with very good results in prevention and treatment of different diseases, are honey, propolis, royal jelly, pollen, bee bread, apilarnil, bee venom, and wax.

Biography:

For over 45 years, Dr. Ladislau Rosenberg activated in research, education, and practice of various fields of integrative medicine, being recognized specialist in apitherapy, aromatherapy, phytotherapy, and homeopathy. He was an Associate Professor at two important universities in Romania, the University of Medicine and Pharmacy in Targu Mures and the University “Lucian Blaga” of Sibiu. He is the author of 11 books and numerous scientific papers (82), published in Romania and abroad, and the coordinator of health education projects, which promotes various natural therapies and their role in preventing and treating diseases. Starting this year, he collaborates with the Bio Quantum Academy from Canada, as a faculty educator.

Immunosenescence and Integrative Medicine: a General Overview

Immunosenescence is the term used to define aging-related events that lead to immune system impairment. Many studies have demonstrated that senescent lymphocytes cannot carry out an effective immune response in the presence of external threats, namely pathogens. Moreover, the gradual accumulation of ROS (reactive oxygen species) and pro-inflammatory mediators affect the immune system functionality, thus exposing the elderly to acute diseases. In order to promote longevity and healthy aging, preventing immunosenescence is a sine qua non condition. This general overview aims to provide evidence of integrative medicine remedies that may prevent immune cell aging.

Biography:

Lisa Dal Pozzo is a Ph.D. student in Chinese Materia Medica at Tianjin University of Traditional Chinese Medicine (CN). She has completed a three-year specialization course in Homeopathy at the Specialization Medical School of Homeopathy of Verona (IT), a two-year post-graduate course in Pharmacology at the University of Padova (IT), and an Aromatherapy course at Tecniche Nuove Academy (IT). She worked as a pharmacist until 2022. She was a speaker at the 74th World Homeopathy Congress in 2019.

Relevance of Traditional Medicine with Reference to Kerala State, India

From time immemorial man has been depending on natural resources for food, shelter, medicine, fibre and other material requirements. The traditional uses of natural resources were developed through trial and error and the knowledge relating to these were transferred from generation to generation by word of mouth and stabilized. Traditional Medicine synonymously called Ethnomedicine, used by tribal and folk communities, is one of the main components of the usage of these natural resources, which deals with the traditional usage of plants, animal products, minerals and the like for treating a variety of ailments. It is said to be cheap, effective and with less or no side effects. Moreover, it had given/ giving leads to the development of drugs in all other systems of medicine. Hence considered as the “Mother of all systems of medicines”. The present communication focus on the relevance of Traditional Medicine on the basis of author’s 30 years of research, as an Ethnobotanist, among the tribal and folk communities of Kerala State, India.

Healing of Diseases with Subjective Symptoms such as Pain and fever and Efficacy of Antiinfective Drugs: Prediction and Verification by Molecular Modeling

In Japan, PET and MRI image data and biopsy of the affected area are used for cancer screening for adults. Based on the results of the examination, an oncologist will perform treatment to remove cancer cells. Patients who are asymptomatic after surgery can return to a healthy life as long as they are not treated with chemotherapy.

Disease problems are those accompanied by subjective symptoms such as pain, fever, respiratory distress, and loss of appetite. The symptoms are that the cell membrane is damaged for some reason, viruses and bacteria enter the cell, and compete with the mitochondria of the engine of the cell.

We describe healing of diseases with subjective symptoms by activation of mitochondria, and the results of pharmacological verification of so far developed infectious disease drugs on the basis of molecular modeling.

Unique Benefits of Auricular Diagnosis

Unique Benefits of Auricular Diagnosis: Auricular Medicine is a specialty within Traditional Chinese Medicine that has its roots in the Huang Di Nei Jing and some of its branches in Western Medicine. Using the micro-system of the Auricle, Auricular Medicine has developed into an incredibly sophisticated system of both diagnosis and treatment of all bio-systems of the body. The diagnosis is remarkably comprehensive and accurate. Without a patient interview, or history, the examination alone provides the doctor with more information than the patient's intake paperwork. This brief introduction will discuss some of the benefits unique to Auricular Medicine Diagnosis. The discussion includes interesting cases from her clinical practice.

Biography:

TruthSayer, DAOM, Dip.OM, LAc, LMFT, has a doctorate in Acupuncture and Oriental Medicine, a Masters of Science in Traditional Chinese Medicine, three Masters Degrees in Psychology and a Bachelors in Chinese Linguistics. Can TCM Five Elements Theory and Astronomy Patterns be used to Observe and Forecast Global Epidemic Occurrences?

The purpose of this study is to explore the possibility of forecasting global epidemic occurrences through the observation and analyzation of astronomical activity in conjunction with Traditional Chinese Medicine Five Elements Theory within the Yellow Emperor's Classic of Internal Medicine. Here, the archival data of Crimean-Congo Hemorrhagic Fever (CCHF), Ebola Virus, Zika Disease, Lassa Virus, Middle East Respiratory Syndrome Corona Virus (MERS-CoV), and 2019 Novel Corona Virus (COVID-19) epidemic outbreaks declared by the World Health Organization were reviewed and analyzed together with their respective astronomical activity as it relates to TCM Five Elements Theory. Correlations were found between the symptoms of each disease and the symptoms represented by the planets within the Yellow Emperor's Classic of Internal Medicine during the time of the outbreaks. In addition, the same pattern-specific planetary alignment between Mars and Jupiter took place in three of the six outbreaks studied, suggesting a possible relationship between planetary alignments and the manifestation of disease phenomena.
